CREATIVE SOLUTIONS FOR VISIBLE STORAGE

Preserving artist-built environments

The John Michael Kohler Arts Center has been involved in the preservation, study, and exhibition of artist-built environments for nearly 50 years. The center's new Art Preserve was created to store and display these works. Designing solutions to house and display such a diverse collection required foresight, teamwork, and attention to detail.

The design team wanted the building itself to reflect the artists' creativity, so they worked with Spacesaver's engineers to design creative visible storage solutions throughout the facility. Each artist's work is presented in a "tableau," or a distinct, immersive setting that reflects their environment.

Casual visitors can view a selection of the artists' works in display cabinets, while other works are in closed cabinets where they can be seen by scholars and members of the general public by appointment. Art racks form "walls" to create an immersive experience and allow staff to instantly change out works on exhibit. Flat-file cabinets preserve and organize small objects and works on paper.

The end result is a dynamic facility with room to accommodate more objects as the collection grows.
